

Telemarketing calls upset the homelife of my children and myself. It is very difficult as working parents to give your children your undivided attention when you arrive home, as household tasks interfere, but to have phones ringing throughout the evening is disruptive and unwelcome, no matter who they are. I would prefer the offers on paper, if they must contact me.